

HII's Newport News Shipbuilding Hiring Thousands

Newport News Shipbuilding contractor Justice Gibson, from Franklin, Virginia, welds a bulkhead aboard the aircraft carrier USS John C. Stennis (CVN 74), in Newport News, Virginia, April 28. U.S. NAVY / Mass Communication Specialist Seaman Curtis Burdick

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. – Global defense and technologies partner HII announced May 23 that the company's Newport News Shipbuilding division plans to hire approximately 5,000 people this year to meet the shipbuilding needs of the Navy.

The shipyard anticipates hiring nearly 21,000 people within the next decade as HII fulfills orders for U.S. aircraft carriers and submarines.

"We at NNS are driven to support the men and women in uniform, to serve the nation, by delivering great ships," said Xavier Beale, vice president of Human Resources and Trades for Newport News Shipbuilding. "This is not just a job. It is a mission to serve national security, and we are committed to investing in our people so those who choose this mission can create a long and rewarding career."

Newport News Shipbuilding intends to hire nearly 3,000 skilled trades in 2022, including entry-level positions and trainee fitters and welders.

Entry-level trade positions at Newport News can pay $21 plus per hour; no experience is required and training is provided. Candidates may be eligible for $500 sign-on bonuses and up to $1,500 for relocation. Newport News is also offering weekly paychecks, comprehensive benefits, an on-site health center and employee discounts.

For more information on all open positions and benefits, visit buildyourcareer.com.